Congressional Delegation Meets First Team Troopers

(Left) Guam congresswoman Madeleine Bordallo talks to Spc. Thomas Boardman, 1st Battalion, 5th Cavalry Regiment, 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Cavalry Division at the Black Jack Dining Facility June 11. During a luncheon with Soldiers from her island home, Bordallo asked them about issues they are having in Iraq. "This has been the greatest lunch I've ever had," Bordallo said. "We're a small island, but we have some courageous men and women." She passed out Chamorro music CDs and homemade Guguria cookies from Guam to the Soldiers.

(Below) Washington congressman Adam Smith talks to 1st Cavalry Division troops during a luncheon at the Black Jack Dining Facility to discuss issues they have in Iraq. "It's been an incredible experience," Smith said. "It gives us a good idea of what they need to perform their job. The biggest thing they need is the long-term support from our nation." Smith, along with three other congressmen enjoyed a hot meal with their states' Soldiers June 11.

(Above) Virginia congresswoman Jo Ann Davis meets with Virginia Soldiers during a luncheon at the Black Jack Dining Facility June 11. She discussed issues affecting the troops in Iraq. "I came out, number one, to say thank you to the men and women in the military for what they are doing; for helping us keep our freedoms of the United States," Davis said. Some of the issues the Soldiers raised with Davis included getting more armored vehicles and the new stop loss issue put out Armywide. "It was great ... to be able to see the folks from back home and thank them," she said.

Planning a New Route Through Al Rashid

By Spc. Andy Miller

122nd MPAD

CAMP FERRIN-HUGGINS- To find their way around the Al Rashid district of Baghdad, Soldiers from the 5th Brigade Combat Team, 1st Cavalry Division, depend on a small team from the 123rd Engineer Detachment. This four-Soldier terrain team is known around the forward operating base for their ability to quickly and accurately put together a variety of topographic products, more commonly known as maps.

Sgt. Jerry McCoy, a topographic analyst, said his team has made nearly 2000 individual map products since they arrived at Camp Ferrin-Huggins in March. The team produces all types of topographic products. They create two-dimensional printed road maps to full three-dimensional flight simulator computer programs that allow an operator to virtually fly through a section of the city.

"Based on what the mission requirement is," McCoy said. "We gather the information from a database, and then we compile all of the information that we receive from the database, and basically make a terrain product."

In this way, the terrain team can create a tailor-made map for each mission conducted in Al Rashid. A map used to conduct a tactical cordon and search operation might have different information than a map used by engineers to study Al Rashid's sewage system. By using the latest technology in topography, the terrain team can create such custom maps, made to order, for the commanders who need them.

"It enables the leaders or whoever is using the product to accomplish their mission faster, and with only one reference," Sgt. Maj. Robert Carmel, of 5th BCT headquarters, said. "If all the data that you need for a particular mission is already on the map, then it enables you to execute your mission faster."

This method of creating customized mission specific maps from a database of digital information is a significant development in the world of topography. It wasn't long ago that the Army was using base maps and overlays to plan for specific missions, explained McCoy. Overlays are transparent plastic sheets placed over a

"Now we get the hard copy images from [the National Imagery and Mapping Agency (NIMA)] on digits," McCoy said. "It allows for a split second decision to be made. It's no longer 'I need to see this on the overlay,' and then it's like, 'OK, it will take me two or three hours to draw this on an overlay.'"

First Team Joins in National Day of Remembrance

► From Killeen Daily Herald

From Iraq to Texas, Fort Hood Soldiers will join other federal branches in closing today to observe a national day of remembrance for the late President Ronald Reagan.

Reagan, the 40th president of the United States, died Saturday at 93.

"I have the utmost respect for Ronald Reagan," said James D. Thurman, who will assume the helm of Fort Hood's 4th Infantry Division on June 18.

"He brought the military back and was ultimately responsible for the removal of the Iron Curtain."

In Baghdad, Maj. Gen. Pete Chiarelli, the 1st Cavalry Division commander, told his troops that the "nation lost one of its most noble citizens.

"President Reagan dedicated much of his life to public service, first as an Army officer in World War II, as governor of California and as president," Chiarelli stated in an e-mail.

Reagan joined the Army's Enlisted Reserve Corps at Des Moines, Iowa, on April 29, 1937, as a private assigned to Bravo Troop, 322d Cavalry Regiment.

He later was commissioned June 18, 1937.

Reagan separated from active duty Dec. 9, 1945, at the rank of captain. His reserve commission terminated April 1, 1953.

"President Reagan's love of country and good cheer were evident throughout his successful careers as an actor and political leader," Chiarelli stated. "His earnest devotion to principle and the nation was evident in all he did."

"The nation grieves today and we honor our former commander-in-chief," Chiarelli said. "Soldiers, airmen, and civilians of the 1st Cavalry Division pay a salute of gratitude to President Reagan and share in his loss with his family."

Terrain Team Provides Better Picture of Baghdad

submit his request to the terrain team. The team can instantly search their database for specific information and have a new map printed in minutes, rather than hours. Certain sections of the city area are easily enlarged, while detailed features can be quickly added or removed with speed and ease.

In addition to their NIMA database, the terrain team brought several extra large printers and a specialized Humvee truck with them to Al Rashid. With the technology they have now, the team can link their map-making system to a digital tactical operations center, where they have the ability to update digital battlefield maps in real-time. For now, the team is busy printing out up to 40-by-15-foot size maps to help the 5BCT have a better visual understanding of this area of Baghdad.

"The products that I make help a unit get to where they are going and back," Spc. Alfredo Casillas, a topographic analyst with the 123rd terrain team, said. "I know that what I make and what they use is something that could save their lives and make sure they come back safe."

'Field of Dreams' Hails 15th Anniversary

▶ From AP
WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif.- Kevin Costner says he would be glad to make another baseball movie, and wants to direct another cowboy film.

He also believes that disgraced Chicago White Sox star Shoeless Joe Jackson should be in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Costner was on hand Wednesday at the DVD release party for the 15th anniversary edition of "Field of Dreams." Universal Studios dressed a West Hollywood baseball field with corn stalks and bleachers and projected the film on an outdoor screen for a crowd that included Costner's co-stars Amy Madigan and Timothy Busfield.

Costner said the mystical tale might have a tough time finding an audience today in the middle of special effects-laden blockbusters and sequels.

The movie follows Costner's character as he builds a baseball diamond in an Iowa cornfield to attract Shoeless Joe Jackson, who was banned from baseball for life after his team was found to have thrown the 1919 World Series.

Jackson's teammates were found to have taken money from gamblers to purposely lose the series. Jackson knew about the scheme, but said he refused the money and actually played some of the best games of his career during the series.
